Filling the Void- Expand Your Emotional Vocabulary!

People engage in risky behaviors because it helps them fill a void or meet a need that they're not getting somewhere else. The void often leaves people feeling very empty. When we engage in risky business for a long time, it can get to a point where it feels like we're in a relationship with the drug of choice or the risky behavior. Risky behaviors are accompanied by rituals or habits. Habits - and the strong feelings connected to them - make it hard to "break up" with the risky business that has become a part of our lifestyle. To understand why we do the things we do, it takes time and practice to recognize thoughts and feelings.

People are pretty bad at identifying their true feelings.

When asked about our feelings, people will usually say they feel: bad, sad, mad, good, or fine. But underneath are many words that better describe how we feel. Taking the time to slow down and identify what we are really experiencing can improve our communication.

Here is vocabulary list. See if you can use some of these words in your own conversation to enrich your relationship with yourself and with others. Don't be afraid to use new words- you might be surprised by how rich your life can be! Notice how many more negative feelings there are than positive? Sometimes creating new words can be rewarding.
